Meet Our Magazines: Outdoor Photographer

One of the newest additions to our widely varied magazine collection here at the Pembroke Public Library is Outdoor Photographer. This title was a part of the collection a few years ago, and due to increased demand we are pleased to be able to offer it again.

Outdoor Photographer includes extensive articles and tips for amateur and experienced photographers alike, covering both film and digital photography. It also features information about equipment, software, and apps relating to photography. But the most striking aspect of the magazine is its preponderance of photographs. Highlighting nature, wildlife, travel, and sports, this colorful glossy is a treat for the eyes. It might inspire you to bring that camera outdoors during the fleeting summer months to capture the beauty of nature or the thrill of a sporting event, or perhaps to plan a trip to one of the many breathtaking locales around the world profiled in its pages.
Lindsay’s Corner

On July 9 at 3 PM we will be conducting an “apps” workshop to cover some of the more popular apps for your smartphone or tablet. If you have some favorite apps you want me to share, feel free to let me know!

On Tues. July 29 at 6 PM Jenn Kunze, a geocaching.com volunteer reviewer for MA, will conduct a hands-on beginner workshop. Participants will learn all of the basics of this engaging hobby and even get the chance to go out and find a live cache behind the library. This is an open workshop, with no registration required.

As always, please contact me if you would like help using your eReader or smart phone/tablet to download free ebooks from the library catalog. You can email me at: lmccgrath@sailsinc.org or call 781-293-6771 ext. 16.

Our staff picks this month are graciously submitted by Lindsay, the amiable Adult Services and Reference Librarian here at the Pembroke Public Library. She has chosen three books which will linger in your mind long after you’ve closed their covers.

Her first selection is Life of Pi by Yann Martel. In this fantasy adventure novel, a young boy survives 227 days stranded on the open ocean in a boat with a tiger. Lindsay says, “I liked this book because it explores spirituality without postulating. I enjoyed the ending the most because it transforms the book into something entirely different, and made me want to read it all over again to understand the story from a different perspective.”

Lindsay’s second suggestion is A Prayer for Owen Meany by John Irving. This wildly funny and deeply moving story opens with a baseball game wherein Owen Meany hits a foul ball which kills his best friend’s mother. Through Owen’s conviction that he is an instrument of God, the author explores themes of faith and fate. Lindsay particularly appreciated the book’s intricate plot which provoked in her both laughter and tears while moving steadily towards its inevitable conclusion. This is widely accepted as one of Irving’s best novels.

The House of the Spirits by Isabel Allende is a sweeping saga that follows three generations of the Trueba family in Chile during a pivotal political era. The author’s debut novel, it was first published in 1982 and has become a classic of Latin American literature. Lindsay remarks, “If you like historical fiction interwoven with tales of magical realism, undying love, and redemption, you will enjoy this book!”

Likely at least one of these great books has been on the “Someday I Want To Read” list we all keep, at least figuratively. Perhaps Lindsay’s enthusiastic recommendations will renew that intention to indulge in the long-postponed pleasure of reading one of these memorable and thought-provoking stories. Thank you to Lindsay for reminding us of some recent classics we may have missed!

For even more recommendations, remember to check the revolving Staff Picks display near the Fiction section, towards the rear on the left side of the library’s main reading room.

Town Wide Read Once Again a Great Success!

The 2014 town wide read was A City So Grand by Stephen Puleo. We were fortunate to be able to have Mr. Puleo speak at the library. He is always a great and entertaining speaker. In conjunction with this event, we offered the Henry James classic in movie form, The Bostonians.

Historian Anthony Sammarco's presentation of images from his book Lost Boston was the final event of the series. It is amazing to see how much Boston history has been forgotten by so many. Both authors offered autographed books for sale. These programs, like so many others we offer, would not be possible without the support of the Friends of the Pembroke Public Library.

Have a suggestion for the 2015 town read title? Send an email to feedback@pembrokepubliclibrary.org. The read decision is usually made by February.

Upcoming Exhibits in the meeting room

July & August
Paintings by Charles Young (1918-2004)
on loan from Leslie Molyneaux, owner of the North River Antique Place.

Charles was a lithographer by trade, and worked for Halliday Lithograph in Hanover for many years. He and his wife purchased a home at 11 Main Street, in Bryantville. Here, Charles and Anne maintained a portrait art studio.

Charles helped with the formation of the Pembroke Arts Festival, and sold his art from his Main Street Studio.

He enjoyed painting nature, and was particularly adept at catching the ever changing features of trees through the seasons. His rendition of bark textures was exemplary. Cats, wolves, foxes, and other mammals frequently were a topic of focus. The seashore along the Scituate coast was another favorite subject, and Charles was masterful in portraying the refraction of light in ocean waves.

Mr. Molyneaux has many paintings by Charles Young. He is hoping to gather some recollections about the artist from townspeople who knew him and his work. Please drop in and view these works of art by a Pembroke artist.

September is open if anyone is interested in mounting a display. Please contact Debbie Wall or Linda McCollum at 781-293-6771.

Out-of-town visitors, please call to confirm the meeting room availability for viewing these wonderful exhibits. If you would like to request art exhibit space, contact the Library Director Deborah Wall at (781) 293-6771.
